Finding the right repair shop is as important as selecting the right car for your needs. Every vehicle from the foreign luxury car to the economy car should be serviced by a trained and experienced mechanic. The trick is to find someone that is both, while keeping the price affordable.

Let's say your car is at the shop for repairs and it's going to be really expensive this time.... Should you give the go ahead, or decline the work and sell it as is? Or maybe trade it in on another vehicle...

I say, "When in doubt, shop!" Yes, shop around for a better deal. I have made many loyal clients out of savvy shoppers that call up to see what I am charging for the same repairs.

Price starts off as the motivating factor, but after meeting with them and going over the needed repairs, they usually have a better understanding of the "big picture" of what is going on with their car.

Their decision of what to do with their vehicle is a lot easier when all the options are laid out clearly. Their choice usually comes easily and quickly, and without regrets!

Don't get me wrong, there are some cases where it makes more sense to move on to another vehicle, but the knowledge of "when or if", is the advantage of having a good working relationship with your technician.

Thanks to JTCA: A NEW School for Lealman

Late in 2001, JTCA was surprised with news that a school of 550 "dropout prevention students" were going to be "dropped" into our new Azalea Middle School. Believing they could be serious discipline problems, JTCA rose to the occasion, writing letters of opposition to the School Board. Dr. Ed Carlson's letter was posted on the Bulletin Board at Lealman school – resulting in anonymous mail. Then a counselor called, and JTCA discovered that Lealman is an academic intervention school to get students back on the right path. While 60% of students graduate high school, a long term study shows that 95% of Lealman Middle School students graduate high school. And, Glenn Bailey, long admired administrator by Dr. Carlson, was principal!

The school, built in 1926 was too old to be updated to code requirements. In the late 1990's, employees blamed allergies, asthma and other respiratory problems on the facility and had been plagued by termites, molding walls and mildew for years.

When a proposal was made to "place" Lealman students into P-Tech with adults, pregnant teens, and NO playground area; Dr. Ed Carlson and Steve Plice swung into action to assist the parent-teacher group. Florida Progress provided a grant for an exposition at Lealman to increase visibility, Mayor Baker attended. A nonprofit corporation was formed to receive money.

Working with CONA, the Mayor's office, state legislators, meetings with Dr. Hinesley (Superintendent of Schools) to determine what the School Board wanted, passing of state legislation, and the "leverage" of a Historical Preservation petition for all schools over 50 years; Lealman was finally promised a NEW school in April 2002. Longtime principal, Glenn Bailey retired in June 2004, a month before construction started on the site of the old 28th Street Drive-In.

In the fall of 2005, staff and students arrived on the new 14.6 acre campus at 4900 28th St. N. The $14 million, 90,000-square-foot palace boasts modern technology labs and a multimedia center to rival any in the district. It has a modern gymnasium with a stage, a huge cafeteria with a trash compacter, and hurricane impact-resistant windows that let in plenty of light. The students and staff were accustomed to attending class in a city of 41 portables, now have a little piece of heaven on earth, at long last. "When the kids got off the bus they were shocked," principal Cheryl DiCicco said. "They had such dismal surroundings for so long."

Despite the more obvious bells and whistles that contributed to the cost, the children seem most impressed with the little things. "They were saying 'We finally have clean bathrooms. We finally have air conditioning in the gym.'" "These kids weren't asking for much," DiCicco said. "They just wanted to be able to walk from one building to another when it rained without getting wet." Justin Green, 14, is impressed with the new cafeteria. "The old cafeteria was very small," he said. "We were all squished. Now we're all spaced out." The eighth-grader said he is looking forward to operating a new camera as a news anchor for the morning announcements.

Students must meet certain requirements to attend Lealman, DiCicco said: They have failed a grade, are failing more than two classes, have been absent more than 15 days in the school year, or scored a 1 or 2 on the FCAT. The goal is for them to return to their zone school.

New Lealman school brings fresh attitudes

(St. Petersburg Times article)

The old building made learning harder for kids who were already having difficulties. Their building makes school exciting. Marlon A. Walker, February 8, 2006.

Six months into their new building, teachers have been surprised by the boost in student morale compared to last year. Lealman principal, Cheryl DiCicco said she has been amazed with the boost in staff morale as well. "It was a real second-class environment," said DiCicco, an educator for 31 years, who came to Lealman two years ago as principal. "It's like night and day. This is a real school."

Teachers tell stories of rats running across classroom floors during lessons in the old school. Students tell stories of walking in the rain to go between classes. That has all stopped with the new building. "Because of the new environment, they're having more buy-in to what they're doing," teacher Laura Hunter said on the students' new-found willingness to be more active. The new environment, compounded with the students' new attitudes, has encouraged her as well. "When it got real bad in 1996, it was difficult to teach in (the old building)," said Hunter, who has been teaching at the school for 19 years. "For me, this is like a dream come true."

Student Daniel Askew, 13, who remembers the old building, said people had to deal with respiratory ailments. He said the new building's inclusion is the biggest advantage. "We have all our equipment in the new building," the eighth-grader said.

Seventh-grader Jenna Holland, 13, likes the amenities found in the new building. "I don't think anybody else has a dance room," she said. "We've got a better school than anyone else."

"Our kids need services they're not getting in other areas," said Darrell Kretz, the school's technology specialist. "They arrive with their little attitudes, but you see them grow to focus on graduating high school." Lealman offers extensive student services support, which includes an on-site social worker and psychologist.

Student Daniel said he appreciates the fact that he gets more help at Lealman than he would at his neighborhood school. Leaving Lealman, and its intimate environment, at the end of this school year worried him. "They give us one-on-one action here," he said.

"A lot of them come with social issues, so they're not ready to learn," DiCicco said. "We work through other problems to get them ready to concentrate in the classrooms. Here, they don't get lost in the crowd."

The housing market is slow right now, and the prices are not increasing the way we saw them going up in the past five years. The market trend is that we are in a Buyer's market. This means that there are a lot of homes for sale and not as many buyers. Other factors influencing the market, are the rising interest rates, taxes and insurance. Homes are still selling if they are priced right. If you need to sell, call today and get a free market analysis. KC Sells the Jungle area!

The Council of Neighborhood Associations held their 2006 Neighborhood Leadership Graduation Banquet on May 19. The St. Petersburg Yacht Club hosted our event where twenty nine graduates received their certificates and leadership pins. Ingrid Comberg Leadership co-chairman served as master of ceremonies. Former Mayor David J. Fischer was our guest speaker and told the class about the city's growth and development over the last thirty years. Mayor Fischer started the Partnership Office which has gained a national reputation as the best in our country. Susan Ajoc Neighborhood Partnership Director spoke for the city and complimented the leadership program for its development of neighborhood leaders. The Neighborhood Leadership Program is eleven lessons over a five month period of time. The program is held the second and fourth Mondays of each month from six to nine in the evenings. Lessons are held at the Police Station, City Hall, Main Library and various other St. Petersburg locations. The program lets the students meet the people they need to know when problems occur in their neighborhood. Four hundred people have graduated from the leadership program over the last fourteen years. New classes are starting in January 2007, contact Ingrid Comberg 821-2192 for class schedule. CONA wants to thank Patricia Guaveia Planning Chairman and Greg Karpinsky co-chairman for their time and dedication. Special thanks to our group leaders for their help in making our program a success. Thanks to Progress Energy for sponsoring our Graduation Dinner. Home of the Month

by Mary Scott

Steve & Kathy Seley have lived in their home at 8260 36th Avenue for the past 6 years. Their yard is adorned with home-made birds houses and tropical landscaping. They have replaced their roof with a very Key West style metal roof which adds to the character of their oasis. Out back they have added on a 1,000 sq foot deck from which they love to relax with their two Labradors. This is a very welcoming couple which makes it no surprise that their home was nominated by their neighbors.

Congratulations Steve and Kathy.
